Adult Therapist

Capital Institute for Cognitive Therapy, a leading provider of empirically-supported cognitive-behavioral treatments in the Washington DC metro area, is pleased to announce an immediate opening in our growing group practice for an Adult Therapist.

This position is based in our Washington, DC office, but includes the option to see patients some days in our Bethesda location. The therapist will provide individual therapy to patients ranging from late adolescence through the full adult age span. Couple and group therapy may also be options. Depending on experience level, the therapist may also supervise externs and/or postdocs.

Capital Institute provides a collegial atmosphere with fellow professionals committed to quality patient care and continued learning. Dr. Stephen Holland, the Institute Director, is an internationally recognized CBT expert. Many members of our clinical staff are involved in research, publish scholarly articles, present at major conferences and/or provide training to other professionals. We work with a full range of CBT interventions, including cognitive therapy, exposure-based treatments, and mindfulness/acceptance approaches.

With a clinical staff of 17, we serve a large and diverse patient population. Opportunities exist to develop areas of special interest within a general group practice. Work schedules are flexible depending on staff members needs and preferences.

Requirements: Doctoral degree. DC license or license-eligible preferred but will consider postdoc.

Salary for full time licensed psychologist: $125,000-$150,000.
